ANNA CASE SINGS WITH MUCH SUCCESS

AIRS COVER WIDE RANGE

Tonal Shading Especially Notable in Some Swedish and Norwegian Numbers,

Anna Case, a Metropolitan Opera House soprano, rarely heard in opera, gave a song recital in Carnegle Hall last evening. Her entertainment had merits of a high order, if not of a wide range. Miss Care is young, extremely comely Mas Care is young, extremely comely and possesses a voice of great beauty. By honest study she has acquired a good command of this voice and she uses it with uncommon technical skill. It is a delight to hear such pure, hould tones, so clearly attacked, so firmly sustained and dynamically graded with such delicacy. The singer's phrasing showed large control of breath as well as artistic sensibility. Her enunctation was admirable in the several languages which she used.

guages which she used.

She was at her best in the lyrics, which permitted a display of her mas-tery of tonal effects and least happy in her attempts at the expression of emo-tion. Here is an exquisitely finished but not dramatic style. In the arrange-ment of her programme she showed judgment in the relection of pleasing songs well suited to the display of her best powers.

Her singing of Handel's "Angels ever bright and fair" was an artistic achievement of very high order. She man Rubinstein's "Es blinkt der Thau" with understanding, sentiment and beauty, but without reaching its furthest

In some Swedish and Norwegian songs Miss Case shone to great advantage, for in these her treatment of tonal shading and the velvety smoothness of her style were exhibited brilliantly. There was much winsome charm too in her sing-ing of the "Vergebliches Staendchen" of Brahms.

It is a pleasure to say so much that is commendatory about the art of a young American whose whole schooling and career have been at home. Within her field she is a welcome addition to the list of platform vocalists and should Mrs. A. Jackson Abbott, Alexander Rowland, Orme Black, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graham and Miss Florence Gaynor of New York.
